

Test yourself

1 The Scottish independence referendum

Use the adjectives below to complete the text. Change them to adverbs where needed.

final clear heavy independent (2x) narrow official confident spectacular traditional

adverb

Scotland is officially (1) part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, but some Scottish people feel that Scotland should become independent (2). In 2014, after many years of campaigning, the people of Scotland finally (3) voted on becoming independent (4)

adverb

adverb

from the rest of the UK. The vote was close but it was narrowly (5) won by the side which wanted to stay part of the UK. After the referendum, the mood in Scotland seemed to change. At the next general

adverb

election¹, the Scottish National Party won a spectacularly (6) large part of the vote (they won in 56 of 59 areas). The SNP wants to take Scotland in a new direction, and there may be another referendum in the future. The traditional (7) Scotland of tartan, haggis, bagpipes and some of the old heavy (8) industries is still there, but a new side of Scotland can now clearly (9)

adverb

be seen: a modern European country walking confidently (10) into the future.

2 Picture crossword

Complete the crossword with nouns from Unit 2.

¹ general election Parla mentswahl